OVERVIEW

With a background in communications and public relations, Carly Ruben-Stahr leads the firm's marketing program with a value-oriented mindset. She works closely with the firm's management, attorneys, and staff to collectively execute marketing strategies designed to increase the firm's market presence and bottom line.

Through a variety of positions at Jordan Ramis, Carly has developed well-rounded, institutional knowledge of the firm and an appreciation for treating the attorneys as her clients. Her position requires her to wear many hats, from event planning, brand awareness, and content development to managing seminars, speaking engagements, and everything in between. Specifically, Carly focuses on helping attorneys raise their visibility, differentiate in a highly competitive marketplace, increase audience engagement, and identify tools and techniques to effectively drive business development.

When not managing the firm's marketing efforts, Carly enjoys traveling and spending time with family and friends.
